Excerpt: . . . one to six, but in a majority of states In process of revision. New Hampshire, 1134. Iowa and Michigan, 16, 000; Illinois, 20, 000; Pennsylvania, 21, 000; Ohio, 29, 000, etc. New York, 39, 000 or more. the legislature meets but twice a year. Frequency does not seem to be regulated by form of government, for the rural state of Obwalden and the city of Basel are alike in having six sessions a year, and Appenzell Interior and Luzern both agree to have three. Legislatures, within constitutional limits, are masters of their own time and establish their own methods of organization. They are judges of the qualification of their members, adjourn from time to time upon their own motion, and cannot be dissolved by any other department of government. We observe in this latter fact that the state assemblies, notwithstanding some confusion of functions, are not parliaments after the plan of the legislature of England, for they meet at stated intervals independently of any call or dismissal by the cabinet; the period of service not being indefinite, but distinctly terminable, and the life of the legislature measured by the constitution, not by the exigencies of politics. An apparent exception to this fixity of tenure is the provision found in a few cantons for dismissing a legislature by popular vote. If a certain number of voters petition for it, the question must be submitted to the people whether or not the assembly shall be recalled...
