Excerpt: . the operation is managed with care; or an oil, the specific gravity of which does not exactly follow the order of the division of the product (4 and 7); that the light alone, by the effect of a particular combination, the mode of which can only be presumed, becomes the principle of this density, so essential to the solution of the copal (7, 8, 13, 14, 15 and 16), that this essence of turpentine, which at the moment of its rectification has exercised no power over the copal, may by the mere effect of the influence of the light dissolve, after a certain time, the pulverized copal which has been precipitated from it untouched; that the copal even-increases its energy, since the essence can dissolve a larger quantity of it than when it is exposed alone, and without any mixture of opal, to the same influence of the light (5, 6 and 8). These results prove also, that the more the essence (c)f turpentine is disposed to be decomposed, and to furnish acid water, in the coure of the distillation, or during the time of the process for making the varnish, . the less-proper it for the solution o copal; because this free acid does not fail to react on the oil, and to communicate to the whole mass a tint, which it ought f not to possess (11)-; in a word, that this oil is siisceptible of giving a concrete volatile acid...
