Not illustrated. 1915 Excerpt: .of the word species that the evolutionary doctrine has introduced. Yet after all there is a certain tangibility about the idea connoted by the word species that the practical classifier cannot ignore. The blackberry and the raspberry, for example, are so obviously different in many really essential parts of their structure that to deny them specific individuality would be to introduce an element of iconoclasm that would shake the entire structure of systematic botany. So when evidence is presented that a blackberry and a raspberry have been hybridized, and that the offspring is a plant quite as fertile as either of its parents, though markedly different from both, the case seems to give evidence that the offspring of true species are not necessarily sterile. And the fact that the new hybrid differs so widely from either parent that it would be named by the classifier as constituting a new species according to ordinary standards, and that it breeds true to its new form, seems to furnish further evidence that new species of plant life may conceivably arise by the hybridization of old species. In a word, a single case like that of the hybrid Blackberry-raspberry, described and depicted in New Creations under the name of the Primus Berry, would seem by itself fairly to establish the doctrine that new species of plants may arise by the hybridization of old species. Stated otherwise, the case of the Primus berry would seem to furnish unequivocal evidence as to...
